

Secondary Tier 3 Restorative Practice and Behavior Matrix*

Lawrence Public Schools is committed to contributing to a positive school climate, ensuring that all students have multiple systems of support focused on sustained and supportive relationships and relational accountability. Restorative Justice, also called restorative practices, is an alternative approach to the more traditional punitive discipline and school culture. It is a worldview deeply rooted in the practices and values of Indigenous Peoples around the globe. Restorative practices “focuses on community building, belongingness, and peaceably resolving conflicts by creating opportunities for those involved to listen empathetically to one another’s stories, to repair any harm that may have occurred, and to restore positive relationships within the school community.”

Restorative Questions

Restorative questions are effective in guiding one-on-one discussion, small group conversations, and in circles. The questions help shift the focus away from blaming and shaming, and toward repairing harm and rebuilding relationships.

- What happened?
- Who was harmed [impacted], and in what way?
- How do you make things right?

(Restorative Schools: An Introduction to Tier 1 Practices Manual, Restorative Schools Initiative, KIPCOR, 2021, p.7&9).

The following guidelines are used in determining responses to various disciplinary actions. These are guidelines only. Restorative practices are facilitated at every level for any behavioral action. Behavioral issues are determined on a case-by-case basis due to circumstances that may affect the school’s response. The steps outlined below are progressive and are considered incident by incident. Building administrators have the discretion to implement any level of discipline based on the severity of the student's behavior. When students experience a long-term suspension, restorative justice practices will be implemented as part of the student re-entry process. Parent/Guardian communication shall occur in all cases.

Student Conduct (JCDA):

The superintendent shall develop rules to govern student conduct that are consistent with board policies. Each building shall develop their own code of conduct and will annually review and distribute the code of conduct to parents and students through student handbooks. Building codes of conduct will not conflict with district rules or board policy. Violation of any provision of the behavior code may result in disciplinary action up to and including suspension and/or expulsion. This policy was reviewed by Board Policy Committee on Feb 27, 2008.
